Medical Missionaries Appointed to Serve in South Sudan

Drs. Lynn and Sharon Fogleman to Provide Public Health Education and Lend Aid to One of the Poorest Health Care Situations in the World

BEVERLY, Ky. -- Drs. Lynn and Sharon Fogleman have been appointed to serve in South Sudan, working jointly with The Mission Society, the East Africa Conference of The United Methodist Church, and the General Board of Global Ministries of The United Methodist Church.

The Foglemans are both family physicians. They spent 10 years serving as doctors at Maua Methodist Hospital in Kenya, and the past 14 years at the Red Bird Clinic in Kentucky. They plan to work with the 17 United Methodist churches in Yei, South Sudan, which has one of the poorest health care situations in the world. South Sudan is one of the least developed African nations. Electricity and running water are scarce, and most people survive by subsistence farming.

The Foglemans hope to provide public health education to promote disease prevention using the model of Community Health Evangelism.

"Our hope for ministry in South Sudan is to promote health - body, mind, and spirit - while working with village leaders at this critical time in the history of this new country," said Dr. Sharon Fogleman. "We have a vision of healthy Sudanese people of many tribes and languages working together for truly healthy communities by knowing Jesus and helping to make Him known."

Sudan has had a long history of civil war and strife between the largely Arab, Muslim north and the non-Arab, non-Muslim south. More than four million people were displaced and more than two million killed during the conflict that began in 1983 and lasted more than two decades. The Comprehensive Peace Agreement of 2005 led to "relative peace" and displaced persons starting flooding back into their southern homeland. In January 2011, the people of southern Sudan voted overwhelmingly for independence from the North. South Sudan became an independent state on July 9, 2011.

The Foglemans will move to South Sudan in February 2012.

Founded in 1984 in the Wesleyan tradition, The Mission Society (www.themissionsociety.org) exists to mobilize and deploy the body of Christ globally to join Jesus in His mission, especially among the least-reached peoples. To that end, the Mission Society recruits, trains and sends Christian missionaries to minister around the world. It develops diverse programs and ministries in keeping with its missionaries' unique callings and gifts, ranging from well-drilling and the arts, to more traditional ministries, such as teaching English and church-planting. Its church ministry department provides seminars, workshops and mentoring for congregations in the United States and abroad, helping equip churches for outreach in their communities and worldwide. Its vision is for the Kingdom of God to advance among all peoples, bringing about redemption and reconciliation through Jesus Christ. At present, The Mission Society has more than 200 missionaries in 37 countries.
